TRIED TO BURN AN OFFICE

Inability of the Police to Capture the Villains-Notes and News of the State in General.

DETROIT, April 8 .- The drebug ap pears to be growing active again. When the employes of Ostler's printing establishment, at No. 79 Shelby street, visited the cellar this morning they found a wad of oiled rage covered with paper lying on top of a wooden tool chest. The bundle had been partly burned, but luckily went out before doing any damage. The wad of rage was similar to those found in the buildings which the Bloom boys attempted to fire. The latter are still in jail awaiting trul. They seem to re-gard their arrest and probable conviction as a huge joke. They claim to enjoy themselves, and are not at all

An Astonished but Considerate Prince. One of the leading families in Stuttgart gave a supper party to which the prince royal had been invited. His royal highness arrived a little before all the preparations for the feast were completed. Observing that he had arrived a little too soon, he decided to take a short stroll in front of the house while daylight was fading into dark. Sudlenly a trim servant maid bounded out of the house and ran up to the prince, to whom she handed a parcel containing, as it afterward turned out, a large piece of sausage and some money, and exclaimed under her breath:

"You won't have to come today; we're having a large party; the prince himself is coming; so goodby till tomor-row!" and with that she gave his royal highness a couple of hearty kisses and disappeared before he had time to get a word out.

A moment later he perceived a soldier in his cleak, who was casting wistful glances at the lighted windows of the house, and asked him if his sweetheart lived there, and on the man's replying in the affirmative the prince con-

"Then this parcel must be intended for you. The person who brought it sends you word that you are to come tomorrow, for she has no time today on

"Much obliged; it's all right, I'll come tomorrow," said the seldier. "She gave me something besides." the prince went on to say, "but I can't deliver you that." "Oh, you may keep it and welcome," rejoined the soldier. "I've plensy here for today."

Everybody at the party noticed that his highness was more lively and good humored than usual. He narrated his adventure over the cigars and wine, but exacted a promise that neither the servant girl nor the soldier should suffer in consequence of the disclosure .- Leeds

Heirs Apparent and Presumptive. There seems to be a good deal of con-fusion in the minds of the public and the press as to what constitutes the difference between an "heir presumptive and an "heir apparent," and one gentleman who has been informed that there is no "heir presumptive" to the throne at the present time, writes to inquire of me whether Prince George of Wales is not entitled to that designation. should say certainly not. In point of law, the heir is the party who succeeds to an estate or a dignity by the demise of the previous holder; and a man can only have du his life an "heir apparent," or an "heir persumptive."

The Prince of Wales is now the heir spparent to the throne, and while he lives there can be no other heir. Prince George is the heir apparent to the princedom of Wales, and he is not heir to the throne at all, except in the loose and inaccurate sense in which all persons who may by any possibility be-come entitled are spoken of as "heirs." The difference between an heir apparent and an heir presumptive is that the heir apparent must succeed if he survives the present holder of the digaity; while an heir presumptive, although the heir at the moment, is liable to have his right to the succession defeated by the birth of another heir. There cannot, therefore, be at the same time an heir apparent and an heir pre-sumptive. Should the Prince of Wales succeed to the throne, Prince George, if then living, will become the heir apparent to the throne. Should Prince George succeed to the throne before he has children the Duchees of Fife would be the heir presumptive, her right to the succession being always liable to be defeated by the birth of a direct heir to her brother.-Henry Labouchere in London Truth.

He Wanted to Be Sure "I went down to Indiana not long ago," said a Michigan Central engineer to the reporter, "to see my folks, who live in a small town on a branch road that is about the worst I ever saw. At a way station a Hoosier came aboard, and a few minutes after be had curled up in the corner of a seat the conductor came along.

"'I say, conductor,' he inquired, 'is this train running now! " Of course it is,' said the conductor, taking his ticket. "Then he relapsed again, and in about fifteen minutes he beckoned to the conductor.

" 'Is this train running now? he asked as before. "'Course it is. What's the matter with you? said the conductor angrily. " 'Don't git mad about it,' urged the passenger mildly. 'I don't mean no in-sult. This yer train runs so slow that I can't tell when it's goin and when it ain't, and I've got to git off at the next station er the weddin that's set fer 6 o'clock won't take place, that's all. I hain't nothin ag'in you ner the road, but I'm jist a leetle mite anxions about landin in time fer the occasion, you understand.'

"The conductor apologized and the passenger was duly deposited at the ap-pointed place."—Detroit Free Press.

The Sanyasis of India

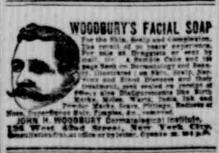

Popular belief in India still credits Sanyasis and other hely vagabonds with miraculous powers. Even the native journals often chronicle marvels like the instantaneous cure of incurable diseases, or the feeding of thousands out of a small measure of rice. One of these prints gives a description of how a saintly Sanyasi saved the lives of a certain rajah and his escort from a wild elephant. As the party was proceeding through the Lower Himalayas a monstrous tusker broke out of the jungle and set to trumpeting. The rajah and his followers were considerably scared. and were giving themselves up for lost when a noble looking Sanyasis appeared, and, standing in front of the travelers, told them to shout a certain order to the elephant. This done, the animal bolted into the jungle, while the savior of the rajah and his party vanished without waiting to be thanked.—Philadelphia

Wholesale Gallantry.

We must all do good in this world according to our natural endowments and the opportunities afforded us. The other day I was riding in a comfortably filled street car when there entered three young women dressed in the narrow sheath skirts of the period. A jolly. portly old gentleman got up to give one of the pretty girls a seat, which she took with a gracious acknowledgment. She seemed rather lost, however, in the generous space vacated by the Pickwickian frame of the old gentleman, so she moved along far enough to let one of her companions share the benefit.

Now whether the passengers crowded together imperceptibly, or whatever may have happened, the two slender young women did not yet take up the whole seat, and the third blushingly squeezed into what was left of it. By this time the other people in the car were too much amused to conceal their smiles, and the old gentleman himself was one vast glow of satisfaction. "It isn't all of you that are fitted to perform such a wholesale act of gallantry," said he, in a low tone, to a friend in the corner of the car.-Kate Field's Washing-

Whenever it is possible the entire floor should be of some good hard wood, whose natural color will grow richer with age and whose smooth surface grow smoother with the wear of years. It costs no more to relay a floor than to purchase a good car-pet, and rugs can be added, if necessary, by degrees. Mahogany and cherry are in favor for floors, and may be used with the lighter varieties, as ash, maple, butter-nut and oak. An entire floor of maple in harrow strips, perfectly laid, is one of the best and most durable. The French floors, which are almost perfect, are laid on an even hed of cement and are perfectly firm, level and lasting.—Decorator and Fur-
